There is a ditch along west side of Co road which drains higher land to west. Had been there for 15 years, Mr. Boorman has used the water for 15 years. The road drains onto his land by this ditch and a flume which crosses under road. It is not a tributary to Phelps Creek, but has been thus drained onto his land for 15 years. Parties above him and along this ditch are trying to divert the water to their lands; so the water accumulates at various places along the ditch for 2,000 feet due south, and he wishes to hold all the seepage water along this whole line which gives him about 6 inches thru the flume under the road unto his land.
