Remarks: In 1959, when we applied for a building permit, we were told by the issuing officer, that he did not believe we needed a water rights permit for household use. Our building permit stated that we would use lake water. However, he referred us to another government office in Florence. (I do not remember what branch.) Again the government employee said that he did not believe we needed a water rights permit for household use; but he did give us a pamphlet on applying for water rights from the state. After studying the pamphlet, we still were not sure we needed to apply for a permit because of the small amount of water we would use. We wrote to the state engineering department explaining the situation and asking for clarification. We never received an answer, only another pamphlet, which we already had and which we could not interpret. At that point we gave up and did nothing further until recently when a friend (a building contractor) told us a water rights permit is necessary for household use.
