On December 4, 1992, I made a survey of the above listed property and viewed the water systems installed and in use. I used an assessor map and an aerial photo during the course of preparing this final proof survey and site map.

SOURCE: Water in Section 11 is taken from two Unnamed Streams and three unnamed springs, tributary to Lane Creek, Judd Creek, South Umpqua River, and the Umpqua River.

DIVERSION POINT: The diversion points are located as shown on the accompanying maps for Sections 10 and 11.
Diversion structure at POD 3 is a concrete dam with wooden flash boards. The structure is approximately 15 feet wide and approximately 4 feet high with 2x6 flash boards. There are two 2 1/2" diameter irrigation pipes installed in the concrete portion of the dam.
Diversion structure at POD 4 is a rock and earth dam approximately 4 feet wide and 1 1/2 feet high to collect water for irrigation.
Diversion structure at POD 5 is a wooden dam approximately 15 feet wide by 1 1/2 feet high which collects the water for domestic.
Diversion structure for POD 6 is a wood, rock and earth dam approximately 4 feet wide by 2 feet high to collect the water for domestic.
Diversion structure for POD 7 is a wood, rock and earth dam approximately 15 feet wide by 1 1/2 feet high to collect the water for irrigation.

I have researched records at the Douglas County Clerks Office, Douglas County Library and the Douglas County Museum. The following is the information I discovered about the Riddle area and our property.

The first settlers in the Riddle area was the William H. Riddle family who filed a donation land claim in 1851 on what is now known as Glenbrook Farm. In 1852 other homeseekers began arriving in this area. The first were John Catching, James Catching, W.L. Wilson and I.B. Nichols. Alfred Cornutt and his family moved to the Riddle area in 1868 and purchased 500 acres of rich farm land.

John Cornutt, son of Alfred Cornutt and Sultance Jane Duncan were married in 1873. At that time John bought the Judd Land Claim and built his home. This home was located one half mile above the forks of Lane Creek and Judd Creek, on the north side of Judd Creek some two miles north of Riddle. John Cornutt owned a Section of land, which included 80 acres in Section 11. This 80 acres is now a part of our ranch. John raised cattle, planted a garden and an orchard. In that time this area was entirely dependent on stock raising and agriculture.

Fred Sauderson homesteaded on the north east quarter of Section 10 and built a cabin there. He filed a patent with the U.S. Government on June 3, 1891 for this parcel.

Legend tells around 1897 Bob Hinman lived with Fred Sauderson. Hinman was accused of robbing the general store in Riddle. When the men came to the cabin to arrest Hinman, Hinman shot and wounded one of the men. He escaped, skipped the country but was later caught. A few logs of this old cabin are still visible. An old orchard is also standing near the site of this cabin.

Edward Josselyn and Samuel Russell bought the Sauderson 160 acres on July 26, 1899. Samuel Russell sold to Edward Josselyn on January 7, 1904 his interest in the property.

Samuel Russell homesteaded an adjoining 120 acre parcel in Section 11. Samuel Russell did not receive the patent until December 29, 1909. In early times, homesteaders would live on the property for years before applying for a patent. Some even sold homestead land before applying for the patent. When an application for a patent was submitted it took considerable time for it to be approved, signed by the President of the United States and filed at the county courthouse.

DEC 23 1992

Josselyn bought an additional 40 acres from Russell on January 4, 1910. Samuel Russell was a cattle rancher who used to run his stock on the open range like other ranchers of that day.

A U.S. Geological survey map shows two houses on our ranch property when a survey in 1901-1902 was taken. One of these homes was quite possibly the Cornutt house. The other one was certainly the Sauderson - Josselyn cabin. The map did not indicate a home on the Russell homestead. This home many have been built later or was missed on the survey.

Louise Quinlan also homesteaded 160 acres in Section 10. His patent was not filed until July 12, 1915, a short time before he sold the homestead. On March 24, 1916 O.J. Eskelson purchased this land and immediately sold it to W.G. Farrens on April 17, 1916.

Edward Josselyn purchased the remaining Russell homestead with Spencer Josselyn on July 9, 1932. This made a total of 280 acres owned by Josselyn in Section 10. Edward Josselyn raised cattle, sheep and farmed the land. Josselyn must have been an expert roper because the old photos of him show him on his horse with a cow roped. Josselyn is remembered as a neighbor who helped others with their cattle. One photo shows Josselyn spaying a Heifer on the Cornutt ranch. This photo was taken very near where our present home sits. He lived many years on this property.

Clara B. Woodruff owned 120 acres in the north west quarter of Section 10 in the 1930's. No deed of record was found, after searching the Douglas County Clerk's records back to 1857 of her buying this property. A Metsker Map at the Museum shows her owning the property in 1930. She may have inherited the land. On May 12, 1933 she and her husband James Woodruff sold the property to Herman F. Cooper. On June 2, 1941 Sheriff Cliff Thornton deeded this property to Douglas County for tax liabilities due on May 29, 1940.

Claire Burgoyne, born 1907, had lived in Riddle since 1911. On October 27, 1926 he bought his first 40 acres in Section 11 from John Cornutt and J.H. Boyer. Cornutt had deeded one half interest to J.H. Boyer March 12, 1923. The Burgoyne property was later to become our ranch.

Claire lived in a cabin on the 40 acres. He raised cattle, sheep, horses, farmed, had a garden and orchard. He bought 160 adjoining acres in Section 10 from W.G. Farrens November 8, 1927. Another 40 acres was purchased from John Cornutt and J.H. Boyer on October 10, 1931 in Section 11. Claire Burgoyne worked hard on his ranch and continued to improve the property. On March 14, 1939 Claire bought Edward Josselyn's ranch which was then 280 acres in Section 10. The final parcel purchased by Claire Burgoyne was 120 acres in the north west quarter of Section 10. This was bought at a Sheriff Tax Foreclosure Sale on September 23, 1943. Claire and Ida Burgoyne now had a total of 640 acres of deeded property. Adjoining land was leased from BLM and private property owners for grazing cattle. Claire like the early homesteaders farmed, hunted and raised livestock. Claire and Ida Burgoyne had three children who were raised on the ranch. Claire built several of the buildings which still stand on our ranch. The original cabin was later moved and added on to. They had large gardens, fruit trees, berries, grapes, chickens, cattle, sheep, and horses. All of these things required water from the numerous springs. In 1953 Claire was murdered on the ranch.

Ida Burgoyne continued to live on the ranch and built the house we now live in. She kept the ranch going with the help of family and friends. Ida retired when she sold the entire ranch property and equipment to Lloyd and Irene Light, my father-in-law and mother-in-law, and Lyle Light, my husband, on October 17, 1968. Lyle and I were married in 1969 and have always lived in the Burgoyne house. Lloyd and Irene built a new home on the property in 1969.

Lloyd, Irene, Lyle and myself moved from North Dakota to Oregon to escape the cold winters and settle in Riddle on a well established cattle ranch. In the search for ranch property we looked for a large enough parcel that Lyle and his father could ranch together and one that would support two families. We looked for property with an excellent water supply but not in a flood plain. The Burgoyne property fit our needs and was purchased.

Our property has year around springs through out the 640 acres. The springs are located at elevations so everything is gravity flow and provides an abundant water supply year around. Our stock water is piped from springs to holding tanks. Our household water is piped into a large holding tank from a spring then thru a filter system and then into the house or used to water the yard and garden. This is the same system used for our rental. The irrigation system for the pasture is a splash board in the creek to back up the water. The water is then piped to rainbirds along the hill side. In early times the water ran in a ditch to irrigate the pasture, garden and orchard.

In the front of our home is a lovely creek which flows the year around. During winter months it flows very swift but in the summer it is a small quiet stream. Our water system is a real asset to our property because of the good supply without the high energy costs and maintance expenses of pumping water. I am sure this has also been the experience of the past ranch owners as well.

My father -in-law, Lloyd retired on the property and lived here until he passed away. My mother-in-law, Irene lived another year on the ranch before selling her interest to Lyle and myself on May 16, 1988. She has a home in Roseburg. Their house has been occupied by renters ever since.

The old orchards still produce fruit each year. We continue to lease property from BIM and private land owners for grazing cattle.

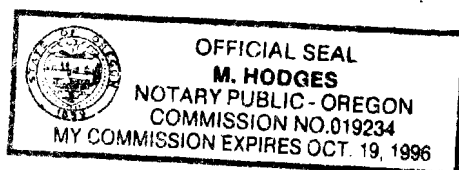

Through this research we have found many interesting facts about our ranch. I am sure some of the appeal we have today for our ranch was felt by the homesteaders. It is a nice quiet, peaceful canyon. Close to Riddle for shopping and schools. In early days it was close to public transportation as the railroad went thru Riddle in 1882. It is a ranch with continued hard work will support a family. It produces products used by consumers. It could meet all the needs of the early homesteaders with it's good soil and water for orchards, crops, and gardens. It had good grazing for livestock. It had plenty of trees for building cabins, barns and winter supply of firewood. It was an excellant place to raise children. It provided a comfortable climate.

The following information has been gathered to suport our Pre-1909 Vested Water Right Claim. Copy of Deeds and Patents from the Douglas County Clerks Office. Copy of US Geological Survey maps from Douglas County Museum. Copy of published publications by pioneer families from the Douglas County Library system. Copy of the existing water rights filed with the State of Oregon with receipts of prior fees paid. Affidavits from people still living who are familiar with our ranch in the past as well as the present. Photos taken on our ranch showing this is an active cattle ranch.

If we were to continue our research I am sure we would find additional information that this ranch has been in existance since the late 1850's when the Cow Creek Valley was first settled. Our supporting evidence is to calim a water right with a priority date of 1891.

William H. Riddle

Father of the author of this book, he led his family across the Great Plains and mountains in 1851 from Sangamon County, Illinois to Southern Oregon, where he was the first settler in lower Cow Creek Valley. He earned the name of "Lontu" (old man) from the Indians because of his wisdom and fairness in his dealings with them.

ARTICLE XII

I N writing a sketch of my recollections of Mi-wa-leta, chief of the Cow Creek Indians, I must necessarily include many of the incidents of the early settlement of southern Oregon. Our first meeting with the Cow Creek Indians was in the latter part of October 1851, when my father with his family moved onto his donation claim, or what is now known as Glenbrook Farm. At that time the nearest house was the Wm. Weaver house, eight miles nearer Myrtle Creek and Canyonville, where Joe Knott was located, and which was the frontier house in southern Oregon, not a house south of that in the territory.

At that time my father's family consisted of my father and mother, three daughters, one a widow with a child two years old, and four sons, one older and two younger than myself, a sister of my mother, a spinster, and an orphaned cousin, a girl eleven years old at that time; and in addition, two young men who drove ox teams. I was not quite twelve years old then. I remember that we arrived at our destination at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and camped under the oak tree that now stands in the yard immediately north of the Glenbrook farmhouse. In a very short time our camp was surrounded by Indians who seemed to come from every direction. This caused us no alarm. They came from curiosity—old Indians, squaws, papooses and all came to the number of a hundred or more. They were curious about everything—the children were objects of interest, many of them never having seen a white child. A cook stove was set up and a fire started in it, which excited their wonder and curiosity. One young buck came in contact with the hot stove pipe on his naked shoulder which caused a leap and yell from the buck, but uproarious laughter on the part of the crowd. The Indians, although friendly and good-natured, were crowding so closely about the camp that my mother and sisters were unable to prepare the evening meal, and this situation was becoming embarrassing. At that time we heard the words "Mi-wa-leta, Mi-wa-leta" and a hush fell upon the crowd as an Indian appeared whose presence and appearance showed that he was one in authority. He was a man between sixty and seventy years old, about six feet tall, of heavy build, with full, round face, at least as I remember him, with none of the gnarled features of the moving-picture Indian. The Indians seemed to regard him with reverence, more than fear. My father advanced to meet him, and by signs made him understand that he wanted the Indians to stand back out of the way, which they did, forming a circle around our camp where they seated themselves upon the ground or squatted upon their heels. My mother offered the chief a chair, which he declined, but seated him-

EARLY IN the spring of 1852 homeseekers began to arrive in Cow Creek Valley. The first was John Catching and family, who located on what is now known as the A. L. King place.¹

Soon after they were followed by James Catching, a brother of John, and W. L. Wilson, a brother of Mrs. John Catching, both bachelors. James Catching located and his house was built where Otto Logsdon now lives and W. L. Wilson where the Henslee farms are now located.²

Mrs. Mary F. Riddle is a daughter of the late John Catching and was the first white child born in southern Oregon, south of Roseburg, and P. A. Wilson is a son of W. L. Wilson.

The farm where Samuel Ball now lives was first located by Green Hearn, a bachelor, who afterward resided on Myrtle Creek and was never married.³

I. B. Nichols located where B. F. Nichols now resides. My sister, Isabel, and I. B. Nichols were married in July 1852. I. B. Nichols had come from Iowa to California in 1848, had later engaged in transporting supplies from Oregon to the mines in northern California by mule train, had been attacked by Indians on the Rogue River in the spring of 1851, and had met with heavy loss in mules and goods. He had then joined with Gen. Phil Kearney in his attack upon the Indians near Table Rock and in one of these engagements Captain Stuart was killed. Naturally Nichols did not have a friendly feeling for the Indians and the Indians were quick to discover this unfriendly feeling for them. This caused some trouble that will appear in this story later.

It is not my purpose to give a detailed account of the time and place of each settler. Suffice it that during the summer of 1852 locations were made on about all the open lands of Cow Creek Valley. These locations were mere "squatter" claims. The country had not been surveyed and a donation land claim for a man and wife was 320 acres. When surveys were made each donation land claimant could lay his claim to suit himself, but lines must be run north, south, east, and west, but was not confined to legal subdivisions. Now, it would seem that where all the desirable land was squatted upon before survey was made that there would be controversies over the final locations, but I do not remember there were any contests, and in some

FAMILY

I will try and relate as near as possible (as far back as my memory reaches to very early 1851) how things were in the early days at Riddle, Douglas County, Oregon, and what happened to me throughout my life.

I grew up just an average farmer's son. Nothing happened to me or was done by me that had any bearing on the development of the valley around Riddle. I have no living relatives who can freshen my memories, so what I write is how I remember things-- what I did, what I saw, and what others have told me.

My biography I hope may be of some interest to my children, my grandchildren, and my great-grandchildren, as well as others who might be interested in some early history.

I was born in Riddle, Oregon, April 4, 1887, and lived there for 55 years. My education only extended through high school. I have written my story in the language and expressions I heard when I was a boy.

My grandfather, Alfred Cornutt, and his family left Independence, Missouri, in the spring of 1851 by covered wagon, and crossed the plains for the West, arriving at Portland, Oregon, in the fall. He took up a donation land claim near Gresham, where they lived for a year and then moved to the Cow Creek Valley near Riddle. There were five boys and three girls in his family. My father was the youngest, being only one year old when they left Missouri.

My mother's family (the Duncans) came West in 1852, also from Independence and settled near Glide, Oregon. My mother was two years old at that time.

My father, John David Cornutt, and mother, Sultana Jane Duncan, were married in 1873 at the place where Ernest Pruner lives today, about two miles north of Riddle. Father bought the Judd donation land claim and built his home about one-half mile above the forks of Lane and Judd Creeks, on the north side of Judd Creek some two miles north of Riddle. My three brothers and two sisters were born there.

In 1886 they moved to the south side of their land about one mile north of Riddle. (Father owned a section of land: 640 acres.) This is the place where I was born.

HOME

Our home was very modest, as most homes were in early days. The house was built of rough lumber, with one-foot boards for the siding and battening over the joints; shiplap was nailed on the inside, then house-lining tacked on and papered.

We had a living room, kitchen, dining room and two bedrooms downstairs. The house was a story-and-half, with two bedrooms upstairs. There were rough board floors, a fireplace and wood cook stove. The living room was carpeted.

The Bill Mayes family lived across the valley from us, about two miles east of Riddle. Mrs. Mayes had a loom and wove carpets for lots of the homes in the valley at that time. You saved all the rags and tore or cut them into strips about an inch wide, sewed the strips together and then wound them into balls about six or eight inches in diameter. It took a lot of rags to make a carpet for a 12-by-20-foot room, and throw rugs for the bedrooms.

be working at knitting socks or making gloves. We didn't have many books, so he read an occasional farm journal or the newspaper. I think it probably was the Roseburg Plain Dealer.

Dad raised a good garden, with all kinds of vegetables. From the orchard we had plenty of apples, peaches, pears, and cherries, as well as grapes, so we had plenty of fruits and vegetables to eat. We also had three or four hives of bees and lots of honey. We would sell a few dozen eggs and two or three pounds of butter each week to buy the other necessary groceries.

I remember one time when Dad brought home from the store about a two-gallon wooden bucket of pudding--something new the storekeeper had gotten in. It was the best dessert I ever tasted. Mother had a hard time keeping me out of the bucket. It was very much like the Jell-O we have today.

Mother made delicious angel food cakes, too. She would always bake one for Easter. It would be about 10 inches high and covered with white sticky frosting. She would beat the egg whites in a big platter with a wire whip, fold in the other ingredients, and bake it in the old wood stove.

JOHN DRAIN

There was an old man by the name of John Drain who lived back in the mountains above Baker Flat. He settled there in the very early days and raised cattle. He used to stop at our place on the way to town and do the churning for Mother, for which she gave him some butter. He would usually get back from the store to have dinner with us and visit for awhile.

John Drain was a fine old man, nearly 75 years old when I was six or seven. He was a good friend to us. He usually brought something for me when he came by. He finally sold his place and went back East to see his brothers he hadn't heard from for more than 50 years. When he left, he gave my Dad his old double-barreled muzzle-loading shotgun and a horn he had made from a steer's horn in 1849. He used the horn to call the cattle in and then he would salt them. I have the horn today.

When he got back East and located his brothers, he sent us his picture with them. That was the last we ever heard from Uncle John Drain.

OUR FOOD

I was big enough by now to take over the churning. Mother would get a big pan of apples out in the evening and we'd all peel apples. She would cut them in slices, and Minnie would take a big needle and twine and string them. Then they would be hung by the fireplace to dry for several days.

There were lots of wild strawberries everywhere in the valley in the springtime. After we finished our chores and had breakfast, Perry and I would take a big bucket and go out and get our buckets full in no time. The ground was just red with nice big berries. I've picked in places where you could kneel down and pick a half-gallon of berries and never move. Talk about strawberry shortcake and pies--boy, we had plenty!

Mother made jelly and jam and canned a lot for winter use. People in town would get out and pick berries, as there was plenty for everybody.

My pal and pet was a little black dog my folks got somewhere. I called him "Peeper." He wasn't any bigger than a cat and had long black hair. We had many happy hours hunting squirrels and running over the hills.

In the hills nearby there were deer, grouse, quail, and timber pheasants. The old grouse would come down out of the fir timber in the spring of the year and nest along the foothills. They raised their young along the creeks and fed them on grasshoppers and grain from the fields. There is no better eating than a young fried grouse, so we had plenty.

The old "hooters" (the male grouse) would sit in the fir trees on the ridge back of where we lived. You could hear them hooting in the forenoons and it sounded like there was one in every tree.

Perry would take the 22-gun he had and I would tag along behind him. We'd take off up the hill after a grouse. An old grouse would make four or five hoots, then he'd wait 10 or 15 seconds before he'd hoot again. Perry made me walk behind him and when we'd get up pretty close to where he thought the grouse was, he would stop. When the old grouse started to hoot, we would take four or five quick steps and stop until he started to hoot again, then we'd move on. That way he wouldn't hear us.

We'd slip along until Perry would figure out which tree he was in. Then he'd look close and finally spot the old grouse sitting on a limb about halfway up the tree. He'd get the gun up and bang away, and down would come the old hooter head-over-heels. I would run up and grab him about the time he hit the ground.

Perry and I would also go up Lane Creek and pick hazelnuts. (A man by the name of Lane lived up there in the early days, and the creek was named after him.) There was lots of hazelbrush along the creek at that time. We would get a gunny-sack half full or more after we took the husks off. Then we'd dry them. They were nuts like our filberts today.

We also picked wild blackberries and wild blackcap raspberries. Wild blackberries made delicious pies and jelly. After a few years, the wild strawberries were pretty well gone, as the sheep and cattle ate the plants and only a few places where there was no stock could you find many berries. Then the farmers began to plant tame strawberries and other berries.

The streams everywhere were full of trout. I have caught more than one mess of trout on a bent pin and twine string for line, tied to a willow pole five or six feet long. Sometimes the fish would straighten out our pins and get away, but soon we got real hooks and line and then we caught bigger fish.

There were lots of blue squirrels, too, and they would come down in the early fall and feed on the myrtle nuts and maple tree seeds that grew along the creeks. Sometimes you could shoot three or four out of one tree. Young squirrels were good eating, so we had plenty of wild game and fish for many years.

Rattlesnakes were plentiful, too, so you always had to be on the lookout for them. We would kill a dozen or more every summer. I have some rattles now from snakes that were killed over 65 years ago.

DEER HUNTING

When I was six or seven years old, I went deer hunting with my Dad. I would ride behind him on the Kate was used to pull the cart when we went to church or visiting someone. She was also a good saddle horse.

CATTLE BUSINESS

Perry and Dad were in the cattle business. They soon had 65 or 70 head of stock on the ranch. When the cows had calves in the spring, Perry would round up five or six cows and put the calves in a pen by the corral so we could get some of the milk from the cows. We had plenty of milk, cream and butter. Perry did the milking at that time.

I remember one old cow named "Star," who was a bad kicker. I have seen more than one milk pail sail over the corral fence. Star would wait until Perry was about through milking her, then she would reach out with her hind leg and away would go the bucket, almost knocking Perry down. I've seen him pick up a board and chase her around the corral, talking to her in loud language which I didn't understand at that time.

The folks had gotten rid of old Star by the time I was old enough to milk, but I knew what it's like to have the bucket kicked out of your hands and milk splattered all over your clothes.

COMING OF THE RAILROAD

The railroad came through to Riddle in 1882. Up until that time, the people in the valley had to go to Canyonville for their mail. It was two years later before it was built through the Cow Creek canyon and connected with the road from the south at Grants Pass. The coming of the railroad was a big boom to the valley. A crowd always gathered at the depot to see the trains roll in. Riddle became with him on Fridays and we would hunt grouse and deer. Old Piney was one of the best places to get a buck. I have killed several deer up there in my hunting days.)

The machinery at the mine was finally dismantled and hauled down the mountain and shipped away. The buildings were all torn down, including the brick building. People from the valley would go up there and get lumber and brick, and in time everything was cleaned up and hauled away.

The last time I was up on the Nickel Mountain was in 1945, hunting. I came around by where the buildings had been and was surprised to see that it had all grown up to be a fir thicket. Some of the trees were 40 feet tall. You would never know that there had ever been any building there at one time.

In the 1950's, the Hanna Development Corp. of Cleveland, Ohio, got possession of the mine and built a $30,000,000 smelting operation about a half-mile from the railroad, south of Riddle three or four miles. The ore from the mountain now is brought down to the smelter by tramway.

The mining and lumber industry has made a big change in Riddle and the valley in the past 25 years. Many of the old farms have been subdivided for new homes for the men who work there. There are about 1,500 people who live in Riddle and the Cow Creek Valley at the present time, January 1, 1970.

TRAGEDIES

We had a few tragedies that happened in the valley. Around 1897, a man by the name of Tom Mayes ran a general store. One night it was robbed.

A family lived back on the mountain west of town about three or four miles. It was known then as the Sanderson place, but later on was bought by a man named Ed Joselyn. I don't recall the family--but anyhow, a man by the name of Bob Hinman lived there with them. This Hinman was accused of the robbery.

Four or five men (I don't know if there was an officer of the law along or not) went up to arrest Hinman and bring him down. He saw them coming and knew they were after him. There may have been some shots fired. Anyway, one of the men, Bill Huggins, stepped behind a small tree and Hinman took a crack at him, possibly with an old .44 rifle. The tree being small, Huggins' rear end was exposed. Hinman plugged him through the buttock. The bullet lodged on the opposite side under the skin.

The other men packed Huggins out to a wagon and on back to Riddle. The doctor removed the bullet and Huggins soon recovered without any permanent damage. Hinman skipped the country and was later caught along the coast in Northern California. (This happened in the very early 1897's.)

A young man, Otis Bates by name, was working on the railroad with four or five section hands. Otis owned a horse and another man owned a cow. One day, they traded, "sight unseen."

The man brought the cow over to Otis and took the horse home; but he wasn't satisfied with the horse, so in a day or so, he took the horse back to Otis. The cow was staked out nearby and he undertook to reclaim the cow. Otis objected and in a fracas, the man stabbed Otis and killed him. He was arrested, brought to trial for first-degree murder, and was freed. He skipped the country as soon as the trial was over, which was a good thing, as the people were very much worked up over the deal. Had the man

Alfred and Mary Cornutt Pioneers

By

John R. Hall

The Reverend Alfred Cornutt was born August 27, 1812 in Grayson County, Virginia. On February 6, 1832, some six months before his twentieth birthday, he was married to Mary Delph. Mary was the daughter of John and Sophia (Shuler) Delph and was one year and nine months older than Alfred. For the next seven years Alfred and Mary lived in Grayson County and were blessed during those seven years with six children. Alfred was a farmer and as the land in that area had been worn out by continuous farming without replacing the nutrients in the soil, he decided to move westward where he could find virgin soil to farm.

In the spring of 1839 Alfred and Mary loaded their brood into a covered wagon and moved to Johnson County, Missouri. From there they moved to Van Buren (later named Cass) County, Missouri. Somewhere during their travels Alfred had been ordained as a Minister of the Gospel, for the records show he officiated at marriages in Cass County.¹ Looking ahead a few years Alfred could foresee the farm land in Missouri becoming as wornout as was the land he had left in Virginia and once more decided to move farther west. He had heard some wonderful stories of the new land in the Oregon Territory and made up his mind that to Oregon would be his next move, therefore when spring came in 1853 he and Mary loaded their then much larger family into three ox drawn wagons and rolled out for Oregon. Their departure had to have been after April 17th of that year, for the family records show that Thursa Jane, their fourth born child, was married to William George Cathy and the newly weds accompanied the family to Oregon. Alfred's and Mary's oldest daughter, Susannah had married Thomas M. Gragg or Gregg, and they remained in Missouri. There were fourteen Cornutts and the son-in-law, Wm. G. Cathy, making fifteen members of the family who started the trek. This number was, however, reduced to thirteen by the time they reached Oregon. The oldest son, Levi Cornutt, lost his life in Leavenworth, Kansas, and another child, a daughter was buried beside the trail.² The family suffered many hardships and heartaches along the way due to an outbreak of Cholera and Typhoid.³ They also experienced a shortage of food and for a period of time near the end of their journey subsisted on a diet of dried fruit. They arrived in Oregon on the ninth of October after spending nearly six months on the road.

Upon reaching The Dalles, Alfred traded Oxen for provisions and their boat fare down the Columbia River to Portland. They, at first, settled in Washington County near where the town of Hillsboro now stands. That winter they found food to be in short supply and as flour was not available they made bread out of potatoes. They were healthy, hard working farm people and managed to survive, and in 1855 Alfred took up a Donation Land Claim in Multnomah County near where the town of Gresham now stands. Their daughter and son-in-law also located there. In 1856 Alfred was licensed as a Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church.³ He was also interested in having his children receive a good education and this caused him to donate the land on which the first school in Gresham was built.

The Reverend Alfred Cornutt

Mary (Delph) Cornutt

Although the family scattered and sought land in other areas of Oregon, Alfred and Mary remained in the Gresham area until 1868, when they moved again. This time they moved south to where the Riddle family had settled in 1851. At this new location Alfred purchased five hundred acres of rich farm land. Again, he became a very busy man. He, with the help of his sons who were still at home, farmed the land. He also officiated as Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and so the years passed.

The children of Alfred and Mary were,

1. Levi Cornutt born Nov. 12, 1832, died June 2, 1853, Leavenworth, Kan.
2. Susannah Cornutt, born Apr. 17, 1834, married Thomas Gragg/Gregg.

6. Stephen Cornutt, born Nov. 1, 1838, died unknown.
7. Mary Elizabeth Cornutt, born 1840, died Feb. 7, 1848.

Though Alfred and Mary (Delph) Cornutt reared ten children in Oregon who grew to maturity and married, during the last one hundred years they have scattered far and wide and only three people bearing the name Cornutt are, at the present time listed in the Roseburg and South Umpqua Telephone Directory. These three are Dellis Stanton "Dell" Cornutt; his son, Carroll Stanton "Stan" Cornutt and Marvin (Morey) Cornutt, the wife of the late Victor Cornutt of Myrtle Creek, Oregon.

Some might consider Marvin to be a strange feminine name and there is an unusual story relative to our Marvin having that name. As she tells the story, at birth she was given the name Ines. There were, however, several other baby girls born in the same neighborhood that year and many of them were given either the name Ines or one that sounded much the same. This disturbed Marvin's mother and father and when she was five months old they decided to change her name. They had a favorite aunt who went by the name Marvin and settled on that name for her; therefore, we have with us Marvin (Morey) Cornutt. Marvin's husband, Victor Cornutt, was the son of Thomas Noah and Laura (Adams) Cornutt.

Victor and Marvin owned and operated the Myrtle Creek Telephone Company from 1937 until they sold it in 1945. In January 1949 they bought the Douglas Fir Fuel Company in Myrtle Creek and operated it until Victor died in 1962. They also operated the camp and filling station on North Main Street in Myrtle Creek. Victor and Marvin were childless.

Victor's father, Thomas Noah Cornutt, was the son of Clark Freelin Cornutt and grandson of Alfred Cornutt. He farmed for most of his lifetime but was also noted for being a great fisherman. Whenever he could get away from the farm he could usually be found on the banks of the North Umpqua River below the Railroad Bridge at Winchester. He was noted for his ability to catch steelhead or salmon when the other fishermen went home empty handed. There is a story told that happened one summer during the early years of the depression. Tom, as he was known by his many friends, had an old Model T Ford truck, a bamboo pole and an old knuckle-buster reel. As the story goes, he went down to Winchester one day and found the river bank lined with fishermen. As he got out his dilapidated old fishing rig, a man with an expensive rod and reel, wearing waders and sporting an expensive sportsman's outfit, asked Tom what he thought he was going to do. Tom answered by saying he thought he might try to catch a fish. The dude, with a disdainful look at Tom's fishing gear, told him he might just as well put his rig back in the truck as the fish were not hitting anything that day. To this Tom said that he had driven quite a distance to get there and thought he would at least wet his line and proceeded to start fishing. To everyone's amazement on his third or fourth cast he hooked a nice steelhead. This of course, brought forth such comments as, "Pure Luck" as they watched him land his fish; however, when he resumed fishing and after a few casts hooked another fish, the other fishermen started whipping the water, while Tom nonchalantly took his two nice fish and headed the Model T truck back toward Myrtle Creek. The activity was furious as Tom drove away but his two fish were the only ones caught that day.

Of the other two Cornutts, Dellis Stanton "Dell" Cornutt, and his son, Carroll Stanton "Stan" Cornutt, both are well known in the Roseburg area. Dell was the second son of Clarence and Hattie Anna (Bouge) Cornutt. Clarence was a farmer and the eighth child of Noah and Mary Malinda (Judd) Cornutt. Dell is a graduate of Oregon State College and while attending Oregon State played on the college's polo team. He was also a member, for four years, of the Reserve Officer's Training Corps. He worked for Roseburg Lumber Company where he was a supervisor for twenty-eight years. He and his wife, Margaret (Bennett) Cornutt are retired and live in Roseburg.

Carroll Stanton "Stan" Cornutt attended Oregon State College and has worked for Roseburg Lumber Company since his college days. Stan married Joan Blosser and they had four children before they were divorced. Their oldest son, Terry Stanton Cornutt, graduated from Linn-Benton College and is now a professional baseball pitcher for the San Francisco Giants. Carroll Stanton Cornutt later married Violet Mae Rietman and they live in Roseburg, Oregon.

Another branch of the Cornutt family that contributed much to Oregon's early history was that of Thursa Jan (Cornutt) Cathy. Thursa Jane was the first born of a pair of twins, the fourth and fifth children of Alfred and Mary (Delph) Cornutt. The twins were born May 8, 1837 when Alfred and Mary lived in Grayson County, Virginia. After the family moved to Cass County, Missouri and just before they started across the plains and mountains for Oregon, Thursa Jane married William George Cathy. The newly weds bought a wagon and a yoke of oxen and accompanied her parents on the long journey. They settled near Gresham. William was a farmer and both he and Thursa were active in the Methodist Episcopal Church and were firm believers in educating their children. Their oldest son, Benjiman Alonzo Cathy, attended college and became a teacher. In 1880 he came to Canyonville and taught school there. He was a tough disciplinarian but was well liked by his students and as some of the students were full grown young men at that time, Professor Cathy, was much in demand. For the next five years he moved back and forth between Canyonville and Roseburg. Each time he changed schools it was because he was offered more money. While teaching in Canyonville he boarded with his Uncle, Noah Cornutt in Riddle. He was interested in medicine and along with his teaching he assisted a Canyonville doctor during a serious epidemic of Typhoid fever and in 1885 decided to return to college and study medicine. Moving to Portland, he entered Willamette University Medical School and graduated in 1890 with an M.D. Degree. Following his graduation, Doctor Cathy practiced medicine in Woodburn, Oregon from 1890 until 1899. At that time Willamette University moved their Medical School from Portland to Salem and Dr. Cathy was elected as its professor of physiology. For the next four years he taught medicine. In 1903 he resigned from the college and set up a medical practice in Corvallis, Oregon. He continued practicing there until 1922 when he moved to Portland. At that time he became semi-retired and practiced medicine on a consulting basis only.

Dr. Cathy married Lucinda Elizabeth (McFerron) and they had five children. These were Cecil C. Cathy born at Woodburn, Oregon, Dr. George B. Cathy born at Roseburg, Dr. Collins F. Cathy born in Canyonville, Alice Marie (Cathy) Randall born in Portland, and Evelyn (Cathy) Chance.

Dr. Cathy was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Oregon State Medical Society, the Masonic and Eastern Star Lodges, and the Woodmen of the World.

Truly Alfred and Mary (Delph) Cornutt were Oregon Pioneers and much as been recorded of their family. Rena (Cornutt) Parsons compiled a complete family history bringing their record up to 1976, and John M. Cornutt, Poet and Author, has published a book titled "Cow Creek Memories", and many of the accomplishments of this illustrious family are recorded in these two books.

Pearl Yokum Lawson

By Pearl Lawson, 1990

Boomer Hill, a mountain north of Myrtle Creek. In the mid 1800s it was settled by a few early homesteaders: the Ledgerwood family; Russels; Smiths; and others. They farmed, hunted, and ran cattle on the open range. They were a law unto themselves. Then about 1905 a man from Michigan, Fred Johnson, came to Oregon in search of a home and took up a timber claim on Boomer Hill, built a log house and then located others there on the open range. Naturally, those early homesteaders resented the encroachment on their cattle range. In a short time, their animosity grew to a feud, some even carrying guns for protection.

This was the situation when Pearl Yokum graduated from high school in Riddle. She was valedictorian of a class of seven girls, all planning to teach, and she secured a school on Boomer Hill at $45 per month, paying $10 for room and board with the Fred Johnson family, consisting of wife Mae, son Perl, 12 years old, and a 2 year old girl Madge, in their log house.

Monday a.m. found Pearl building a fire in a large stove with some 14 children from both the homesteaders and those on timber claims in the open range.

Pearl immediately saw that she had a problem, so she decided that they were all her students and must be treated alike. She soon forgot what side of the feud they were on, and all went well during the year she was there, sometimes spending a weekend with one or the other. Even the county school superintendent, who visited the school as was required once a year, marveled at how she did it.

The school house was an old rough lumber building of 12 inch boards, and it was very cold. At the close of the term, the board asked her to come back, and she said, "No, but if you ever get a new schoolhouse, I will come back," never thinking they would. Mr. Johnson built a sawmill and supplied lumber for a new school located on the county road. Later, Johnson came to Riddle and asked Pearl to come back and she did. The last day of her second year, she had graduation exercises for a boy and a girl in eighth grade and a picnic. At that picnic were the families from both sides, visiting as if they were happy to see each other.

Mr. Johnson let Pearl keep her buckskin pony up in his pasture so she could go home over the south end of Boomer Hill to Riddle occasionally.

The climax of the feud was a violent quarrel over a locked gate. One of the newcomers was stabbed by one of the homesteaders and the latter was brought to trial in Myrtle Creek. All grievances were aired at the trial; the homesteader was acquitted; and the families agreed to a peaceful solution—the feud was over more or less.

The Burgoynes of Riddle

By Carlyle Burgoyne, 1989

Wedding picture of Napoleon Douglas Burgoyne and Ida Fouks Burgoyne.

Ida Fouks was born March 4, 1873, to naturalized German parents who were farmers in Deer Park, Wisconsin. Her father, Gottlieb Fouks, had migrated from Germany, met Margaret Peterman, who also had migrated from Germany, and they were married in Pennsylvania. They raised their children where most of their descendants live today in Wisconsin. Gottlieb fought in the Civil War, but he had his own civil war with daughter Ida, too.

They were always playing practical jokes on each other. One day when Gottlieb was sitting and reading, he asked Ida to fill his pipe bowl with the tobacco.

She did, but also put a small amount of gun powder in the pipe bowl with the tobacco. When Gottlieb lit his pipe the pipe went one way and Ida went the other. Soon, very soon after, a treaty was drawn which ended all future atrocities. However, in later years the incident provided the family with many laughs, especially for Ida and her dad.

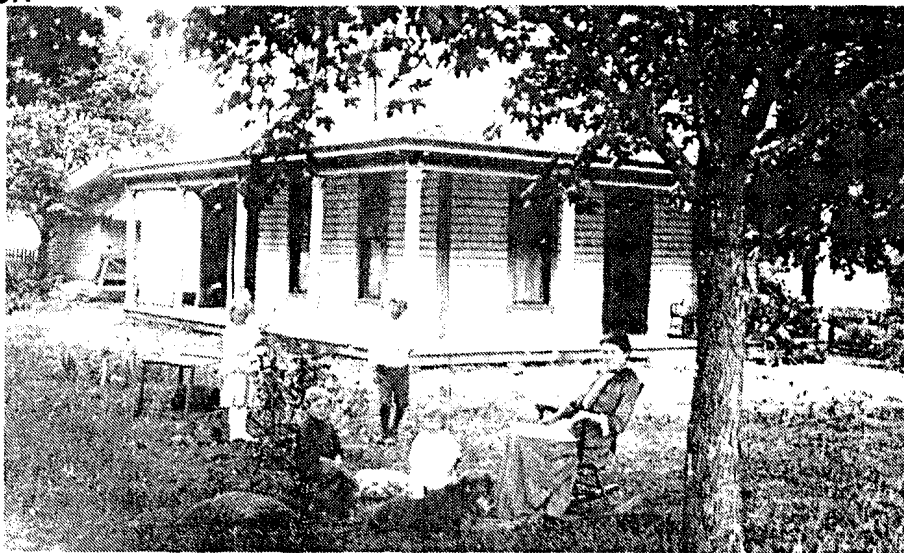

A young man from Michigan fell in love with Ida and the feeling was mutual. He had been teaching school in northern Michigan, but conditions were not right for them to get married yet. The Spanish-American War had broken wide open, and Napoleon Douglas Burgoyne, being patriotic, enlisted. Ida and Douglas promised each other that on his return from the action of that war they would get married.

On February 12, 1900, Douglas was wounded during a furious battle at San Luis, Philippine Islands. He spent two months in a field hospital. Apparently his experiences of having been a teacher in Michigan was reason enough for him to be placed in that position after the fighting in the Philippines. He was on special duty in connection with the army as assistant superintendent of schools in Bataugas Province, and himself conducted a school that he established at Lemery, P.I. Ill health at that time dictated his route homeward.

An article was printed in a Minneapolis, Minnesota, newspaper entitled, "Love and War." The article was about the action of Douglas Burgoyne in the Spanish-American War in the Philippines and the wedding of Douglas Burgoyne and Ida Fouks, which took place May 22, 1901.

For a while the newly-married couple resided in Alden, Michigan, where the first of their children was born in 1902. Unfortunately, Clern Burgoyne, the baby boy, became very ill and died at age three months. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Burgoyne took a train west to Wallace, Idaho. He was a teacher and she was a nurse.

Mother told me a few stories about this experience and the town of Wallace. It had to be another town with Tombstone, Arizona's characteristics, a town of loggers, rough and ready for all comers. She saw two of these "he men" fighting one day. One of the fighters hit the other so hard the poor fellow fell unconscious on the road. The winner of that bout then jumped upon the unconscious man, and with "corked boots" on, walked the full length over the prone body. Ida had to patch up several men who had been losers in such fights.

In about 1905, the Burgoyne couple traveled to Wallowa, Oregon, to take a homestead near Promise which was near the town of Wallowa.

Douglas taught school in Wallowa, Lostine, LaGrande, and Joseph. Ida spent most of her time home in the cabin on the homestead. It was in Lostine in 1907 when my brother Claire was born. My sister, Bernice, was born in Wallowa in 1909. I was born in Wallowa in 1911.

Life for my mother Ida on the homestead in the wilderness of Oregon was hard, especially with the cold deep snows and with temperatures below zero, a common condition in winter. She seemed to spend a lot of time alone on the homestead tending children, a garden, and a cow. Starting a family, pretty much alone, in a cabin in the wilderness was not exactly like living on easy street. The wild animals were numerous, and she saw them all nearby and nearer when a bear came on the back porch to steal a bag of draining cottage cheese one evening. A pack of coyotes fought the family dog in the yard near the cabin one day. Another day she met a mountain lion on a trail nearby. Ida became a sharpshooter with a 30-30 carbine rifle. She was strong.

In 1911, the year I was born, my father accepted a position as principal in school district 70 at Riddle, Oregon. Then he taught school in Missouri Bottom in the area of the present Tri City. He walked to schools, and never owned an automobile. At one time he had a horse and buggy. In later years my mother sold the buggy for five dollars, and it was in excellent condition. I do wish I had that buggy today in my museum.

In 1915 my brother Kelzer was born in our house in Riddle. My mother and father named him Kelley at first but changed that to Kelzer a few days after birth. Riddle was a great town for nicknames and almost everyone had one or two, and Kelzer became Kelley to many of his friends.

In 1917 the United States declared war against Germany, and father went to Portland to work in the shipyards. He was indeed a patriotic man. The Kaiser had about the same rank as Hitler had in the second world war. We kids had fun reciting the following poem:

Kaizer Bill went up the hill
To take a shot at France.
Kaizer Bill came down the hill
With bullets in his pants.

Later on marital problems developed and my parents were divorced. Mother had our old large house remodeled, and had a sign painted "Maple Park Hotel." Meals were served "family style" and were 50 cents. A room with bed, a commode which contained a "thunder mug," one or two towels, a large portable wash basin, a large pitcher full of fresh water and bar of soap, was 75 cents a night. Profit was low but seldom were we ever hungry.

The entire family pitched in to help, and each of us had his own chores to do: taking care of a milk cow, chickens, and other animals; growing a garden; cutting wood and kindling and seeing that the wood box was always full; raking leaves; scrubbing floors; and washing and drying dishes by the tubful. We had a few quarts of milk to deliver every day, at 10 cents a quart, and the barn had to be cleaned every day where the milking was done. Every early fall we children picked prunes from off the ground under the tree and worked in prune dryers. We worked in the packing plant which was about 100 yards in front of our Maple Park Hotel. Prune picking or the prune harvest was a very busy time for the Burgoynes. I don't know how we accomplished so much work. We weren't lazy.

Maple Park Hotel was about 100 feet from the Southern Pacific Railroad, the old Warner home, about eight acres. We began to get train crews for dinners, as we called the mid-day meals during those days. Supper was served in the evening at 6:00 p.m. The depot agent would phone when the crew would arrive so that mother would be prepared for the hungry crew and there would be a minimum time loss for them. We had a wall phone with a crank to make calls. Our ring was two long rings and three short rings. The train crews soon learned this and put it to use to let mother know when their train was about a mile from our hotel. The engineer would whistle two long and three short blasts. All of us would smile and work a little faster. Cooking quick meals, when demanded, was a task that required expertise. The wood for the fire in the range could not be wet for a hot fire, condiments had to be in the same spot every day as well as the basic foods in the pantry. Hot days of summer were sweating days in spite of our special air conditioning system—open doors and windows! Working over a hot stove on a hot day was hell for mother. She was an expert cook and always cooked enough for her customers with some left for her children.

During one period of time, about 1923, keeping a principal to take care of our unruly boys and girls in high school was nearly impossible. The older boys were on the rampage and would mastermind the younger boys and girls to join forces to create nothing but trouble for the principal and his family. If, for some foolish reason, the students didn't like the principal, they would "rotten egg" the home of the poor man and his family. Two or three principals left Riddle, but finally the school board hired one tougher than all the bullies. The drop outs accounted for quite a few young fellows who needed very much to gain with more education.

Yes, we lived in a "jack knife-nickname" age when almost every boy wouldn't be caught dead without a knife in his pocket and he had a nickname that was used more than his real name. To this day I carry a jackknife and have lost a hundred of them. I'm not going to tell you what my school-days nickname was, but the name I liked best was Burgy.

For trimming a hedge or cutting a notch,
For pruning a tree or scraping a blotch
For cutting kindling or a fishing pole, too
There's simply nothing a jackknife can't do.

As we children graduated from Riddle High School we went off to colleges of our choosing. Poor mother was finally left alone pretty much of the time, with almost all of the work load. We children did help, but for mother it still was not easy. She finally sold Maple Park Hotel in 1947.

Mother's family was grown: Claire was ranching on his section of land near Riddle; Bernice was teaching school in Seattle; Kelzer was in a mobile radio broadcasting unit in Africa and Europe; and I was with the Corps of Engineers in the Willamette Valley and at Walla Walla, Washington.

Kelzer died in 1950 from injuries sustained at the Anzio Beach Head in World War II. Claire was murdered on his ranch in 1953. Mother died in Salem, Oregon, in 1956. Both Bernice and I retired about the same time in 1974 and have done a bit of traveling. She lives an active life in Mukilteo, Washington, and I just don't have time enough in a day to accomplish what I should to keep an orderly office. I have my own museum at Shady Cove, mostly of Indian artifacts that I obtained before the recent laws were passed in 1979.

I don't know when we didn't have hobos riding trains for free, but there were more during the depression of the "30s." Mother fed many of these poor guys only after they worked for a while doing odd jobs, but mostly splitting wood. I remember one poor fellow extremely well. Mother, at that time, was too busy in the kitchen to tell this hobo what work to do. I started him working by telling him to pitch some hay that was in a shed attached to the barn through an opening like a window and into the barn. I had other work to do so I left and got busy in the kitchen. I immediately forgot the fellow in the shed and several hours passed by before I came to with a start. I ran to the barn as fast as I could to find that he had all but finished putting the entire stack of hay through that small hole. I felt badly, of course, and told mother. She gave the poor guy enough food to last him several days.

My sister Bernice learned to be a very good cook, and I think she specialized with salads. But don't ask her to kill a chicken. One day, before she learned better, she was going to do the whole job of killing the chicken, picking it, and cutting it up for cooking. She was quite methodical and assembled the tools she would need in an orderly manner; chopping block, hatchet, a tub, and started heating water to ease the job of feather picking. She caught the rooster, and now came the moment she dreaded—putting the poor creature to death! Bernice had her job to do and did it with the hatchet, threw the squawking bird under the tub and ran to the house for hot water. Back at the scene of the crime she raised the tub to claim her dinner, but the rooster, still alive, just walked off. With a sigh of relief Bernice put away the tools, and as far as I know, she still has chicken number one to dispatch.

Our clothes lines were generally loaded with bedding, clothes, towels, and whatever needed drying, all of which mother had washed on a washboard—a hand operation and not at all easy. The clothes lines were often used to hold used flour sacks containing cottage cheese curds to drain.

Mother canned everything in two quart jars except pickles and sauerkraut, which were preserved in crocks. Seldom could we raise enough tomatoes in our garden. I well remember the year that they were 50 cents a bushel at Dillard some 20 miles away. Elmer Love, who was staying at our hotel, volunteered to haul a load of them home in his model T Ford. I bought 10 bushels of tomatoes and a few other items in the produce department. At home mother started canning with me as her helper. She was never satisfied until our cellar was full of canned fruit, vegetables, meat, plus a full bin of potatoes and several bushels of apples. When the woodshed was full of wood and the barn full of hay, we were indeed ready for winter. What a feeling of security! I'm sure that the present generation will never enjoy that feeling—exceptions allowed.

The old school house from which we children graduated was a bit different from the one that was built about 1932 and on our old baseball diamond! Although we had a fire alarm system which included drills, the building was considered a fire trap. The temperature of the rooms was maintained as near 68 degrees fahrenheit as possible by means of steam radiators. Our janitor kept the steam pressure up by using cordwood-fired boiler. We had no electricity for a long time and never missed it. We received enough light by means of many windows. We did have running water with adequate drinking water and restrooms that worked good. Until 1929, I think it was 1929, we had no gymnasium nor stage for the production of plays. Before our gymnasium was built we played basketball in the old Baptist Church, which was actually too small. Then in a pavilion almost a mile from our schoolhouse. We kept enough light for night games by means of gasoline lanterns until T.S. Thompson's two sons, Ormond and Walden, wired it for electricity. Thorwald Thompson was our principal for only two years—from the fall of 1928 to June of 1930. We played baseball on the area where the new schoolhouse now stands. We had a rule, "Over the fence was out!" We did break windows, too. Left of left field was a fence owned by Mary Riddle and right of right field was the MacLane house. We had to pay for quite a few windows—thus the rule. Blanche Riddle, daughter of Abner Riddle and granddaughter of William Riddle, was my first grade teacher, and I loved her!

Our school stage plays were produced at Mr. George Aikin's theater building, which was used once a week for "picture shows" and once a week on Saturday nights for dances. Admission to Mr. Aikin's shows was ten cents for kids and 25 cents for adults. Admission to dance was "one buck," which of course was one dollar. Admission ticket price to our high school shows I have forgotten, but the money we received paid for items for the extra-curricular activities such as equipment for baseball and basketball games and our stage show productions. Some years we could get about $100 for one of our stage plays and we knew we were rich. It was a lot of valuable money in those days.

RECEIVED

Remember, if you can, we had no electricity for a number of years; therefore, we had none of the slaves called appliances that we have today. We felt quite fortunate to have running water, wood for fuel, kerosene for lamps, and a basement (called a cellar) that kept the milk at a cooler temperature. Our bathing was done in the largest clothes wash tub that we had. The water was heated on the kitchen range. Our toilet was a well-built two-holed small house about 100 feet from the hotel. There was a bench on the porch off from the kitchen for washing hands and face; several wash basins, a roller cloth towel, a mirror, soap, and a comb for those who wanted one. As I recall, no one ever left tips for being served meals those days, and we didn't expect any. For that matter, I never knew what a tip was.

Mother kept a register for people staying overnight. Many people of different walks of life signed in for a night's sleep, from actors for the silver screen to ditch diggers.

Our hotel was used for a hospital several times when people, mostly from out of town, would get sick. We children had our tonsils removed there, a man with a very bad case of poison oak recovered there, a woman had her baby there, and others knew where to go when they were struck with disorders that required immediate attention by doctor and/or nurse. We had three patients at the same time one year. The closest hospital was in Roseburg, but Riddle did support a doctor and a pharmacy. Mother had to put her nurse's training to use many times at our home-hotel-hospital not only for her own children but for many other people.

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Lyle L. Light. I and my wife, Janice Kay Light, are present owners of this cattle ranch at Riddle, Oregon.

My wife and I have gathered this information of past people and early settlers of our ranch. It has become quite apparent this ranch is very old. This ranch in early times and also now has always been in use to raise cattle, sheep and other livestock. I will briefly mention some of the supporting evidence found to support our claim.

Starting with the Saunderson log cabin, Saunderson filed a patent on the property where this cabin was in 1891. Remains of the cabin still exist today and an old orchard near it also remains. Ed L. Jossellyn bought this property from Saunderson, Jossellyn was a cattle rancher and farmer.

We have also enclosed in our report some supporting pictures of the old ranchers, etc. of the ranch to give a better feel of this property.

In conversation with the older people in the Riddle and surrounding areas, they all have interesting things to say about the area and this ranch. They claim past owner's raised cattle, sheep, horses, other livestock, had orchards, gardens and also farmed this ground with other crops and hay. They talk about the water system the ranch had, the gravity flow irrigation system used to irrigate the fields, gardens, etc. The old splash board dam is still in use today. And it's abundant water supply from springs.

Some of these springs might seem insignificant to some people but they are a very important part of my ranch. I have improved them by fencing cattle out of them, running the water by pipe into a holding tank, therefor making more watering sites of cleaner and increasing the supply of water. By doing this I can put and keep more weight on the cattle and other livestock. The cleaner water controls parasites such as liver fluke which can devastate livestock.

Ranchers of the past era and also of the present time help each other with roundups and other work, this is shown in some our pictures. The picture of spaying a heifer is taken on our ranch.

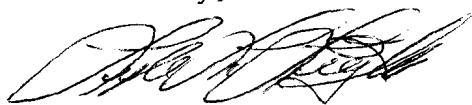

I was born and raised on a ranch/farm in North Dakota. I've always lived on a ranch/farm except for a three year period when I joined the U.S. Army. I servered a tour of duty in Viet Nam. After being honorably discharged from the service, my dad, mom, and I bought this property.

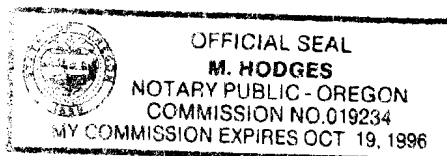

One thing I see the same as years go by is an ever present demand for beef cattle and new beginning ranchers are decreasing. Ranching is a hard life many times and personal goals are often times only noted by the one doing it. Beef prices seem to be good and constant but are not keeping up to the prices on the commodities we have to buy.

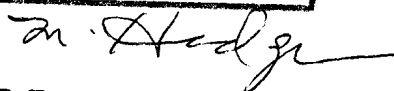

I presently run cattle and horses on this ranch. I now have approximately 125 mother cows on the ranch.

If you need more information regarding our water claim, please call me at 874-2148. This research has been quite time consuming, although it has been quite interesting. I have a real feel of the early settlements on the land we are living on.

I am a rancher who was born and raised on the place where I am presently living. I was born in 1925. As far as I can remember there has always been ranchers living on the property now owned by the Lights. These ranchers also had some farming, orchards and gardens.

The pictures the Lights have found of the heifer spaying scene, (House with roped heifer + men) was taken from the Lights present home site. I recognize the area as in the past years I helped Mrs Burgoyne with working cattle. The orchard beside the old Jaselin Home site would date back into the 1890's.

In my early years I recall talking with Hyman Huntly, who was an older man who told me many times of the water system and orchards that were located on the present Light Property - Mr. Huntly regularly walked through the light property to the old Culver Ranch where he was employed.

To my knowledge the properties owned by my neighbor, Lyle Hight, have been used for agriculture purposes as far back as my memory serves me. I have childhood memories of Ed Josselyn riding into Riddle in his goat skin chaps, and leaving with two burlap bags of supplies thrown over the pommel of his saddle.

My father (Stalley Nichols) and my grandfather (Ben Nichols) spoke well of Mr. Josselyn as a helpful neighbor & friend.

We have family photos showing Mr. Josselyn assisting with Branding and spaying.

The bald ridge forming the horizon looking north from Riddle was known as "Josselyn Flat."

To Whom It May Concern:

My first recollection of the Light Ranch at Riddle was in the spring of 1968 when my wife and I helped my parents, brother and sister in their search and effort to buy an Oregon ranch. Our families' background was rooted in a well established and successful farming and ranching operation in North Dakota, however the long winters had discouraged the next generation from continuing this operation and caused the ultimate move to Oregon.

Having owned a large farm-ranch in North Dakota, my dad, now deceased, knew the basic ingredients which were required to have a successful operation. Many of our actions and conversations during the Oregon search concerned ourselves with finding a large, old, well established cattle ranch which had been operational for a long time. The search ended and the Ida Burgoyne Ranch was purchased after it was found that: 1.) This operation had existed in one form or another since before the turn of the century. 2.) Mineral rights were still intact. 3.) Water was plentiful in the form of springs and that former owners had developed some of the springs. Water from these springs were used to irrigate an orchard up on top of the ranch, as well as a large garden and small orchard west of the current main ranch house. Also, a contoured ditch carrying spring water for 1500 to 2000 feet irrigated a large parcel east of the current ranch house. Water rights were certainly discussed and assumed present during negotiations to purchase the ranch from Mrs. Burgoyne. This old ranch came with everthing including a colorful past, due to its close proximity to Riddle. 4.) The list of successful ingredients went on and included, not being within a flood plain, good drainage, and finally timber holdings; only to be truly realized over the years to come.

During the summer prior to my parents, brother and sister occupying the ranch, my wife and I visisted with Mrs. Burgoyne and her friend, Jim Fogus. On a couple of different occasions, they took us for a tour of the ranch. Once in particular, they showed us the remnants of an old homesite from one of the previous owners which was built prior to the year 1900. Their was little left of the site however their is an old orchard near its location even to this day. Years later with a metal detector, we scoured the old homesite and found a few insignificant items and the old trash pile.

More recently since the Lights' have owned the ranch, a second ranch house has been added, they have continued to develop springs throughout the ranch, and have continued and kept updating the irrigation system to its present status. The Lights' have always run cattle and at times have had up to 100 sheep, a few goats and a few horses. Predominantly it has been a working cattle and timber ranch carrying about 100 cow-calf pairs.

My name is Carroll Stanton Cornutt and I am an American born citizen of the United States. My ancestry dates back to the late 1800's with the Cornutt family coming to Oregon by wagon train and settling in the Cow Creek drainage. My father was Dellis Stanton Cornutt and was born in Riddle, Oregon on March 12, 1906. His father was Clarence Cornutt and he and his wife Hattie had four sons. Their way of life was farming with the raising of cattle, sheep, pigs, and growing big gardens for family use.

The reason I am writing this letter is to emphasize how important water was for their survival, 86 years ago. As far as I know water was not tampered with in any way shape or form. Wells were dug for drinking purposes, creeks and springs for irrigation and cattle and other livestock. Their survival was no different 86 years ago than it is today. I sincerely feel water shouldnot be wasted or tampered with by putting an inconvenience on man at any cost. In those days water was not bought or sold as water rights came with each individual ranch at no expense.

This is the History of Claire Burgeyne farm far as I know. He stayed on the place at least age of 17 Or 18 adding cattle to the place as years went by. Raised lots of garden year after year also some grain & hay. He'd pipe water from the ditches & creek to water the cattle & gardens. He stayed in a cabin even after he married my sister. They used alot of water as it was plentiful. The water ran anywhere they needed it.

They also raised some chickens, sold eggs & vegetables to stands.

We hunted on the place since 1938' till his wife Ida sold out in 1968. Claire lived on ~~the~~ ^{it} till his death. 1953

Otto remembered the cabin a bachelor lived in high on a hill of this place of Claires. Claire would store grain & tools in the cabin. He lived on the ranch at least from 1917 till his death. Then my sis Ida still lived there till when she sold out. 1968

Janice and Lyle Light
Riddle, Oregon

Dear Janice and Lyle,

Enclosed are the original papers for applying for water rights for Lane Creek for the ranch. Also enclosed are copies of some of the early tax papers that may benefit you, and assorted other copies. If nothing else, I thought you might be interested in some history on the ranch!

The 1905-06 tax papers show that some land was being used as agricultural. Please keep in mind that money was so scarce that most likely more land was being utilized for the purpose of raising crops, but people tended to "short-change" the acreage, I'm sure. What sounds like a pittance to us these days was actually a month's wage or more in many cases to a person, quite expensive for farmers or ranchers in those days.

As for original farm buildings on the ranch that I remember: the "lower" place where you reside is close to the home we lived in as children. The original cabin had been farther up the hill, up the lane from the garage, above the fenced garden area, and had been moved to its later site by a team or horses, we were told. The garden was fenced with a split picket fence; my mother planted the orchard and grape vines, raspberries, grapes, etc. The barn near the entry gate existed as long as I remember, not new even when I was a child. The fence around the pasture had been there all that time also, and crops were harvested. When my father bought that original piece of the ranch, he purchased the plows, harrows and other farming equipment which he used. Later my father planted that field to alfalfa and irrigated it from the creek; we had used the creeks for house water, for the livestock, and for irrigating the orchard and garden long before that. My parents raised cattle, horses, and sheep; hogs and chickens (mostly for our own use) were also raised. Cattle and sheep were raised for money-making, while the horses were mostly used for transportation and to pull farm equipment.

I'm trying to describe the ranch in recognizable terms so you can hopefully visualize what area I'm describing and what that area was like... If the road to the top of the mountain still goes around the cliff at its steepest place, there was a cabin above there, having fallen into ruin when we were children. A man named Quinlin (unsure of spelling) and had a garden area, cows, horses, etc., and a small barn. Another way to get to his homesite was to go up Shady Canyon and across the meadow -- he lived on that meadow, with his cabin back near the spring in the canyon.

Mr. Josslin lived on the top part of the ranch, although at one time he may have owned most or all of that area -- the old records aren't that clear. He lived in a ranch house where the A-frame cabin is now -- the A-frame cabin that Mom and we (my late husband, our three sons and I) built. The old house had a wide porch with a view of the mountains and valleys in the distance; it had a kitchen with large wood stove, air-cooled storage cabinet as a make-shift cooler, large old kitchen table and chairs, a zink-topped flour mixing cabinet, and a few cupboards. The large front room also had a bed at one end as a bed-room, with rocking chairs and an old metal wood-burning heater for additional heat. A baby cradle was in the attic, made of an old nail keg with the top mostly cut out, with a small overhang for head protection for an infant. Unfortunately, most of the furnishings were lost when the old house was burned; we were not there when it was burned. We do have a carriage lantern from there that is patented 1906, however. There also was a small smoke house with a very high roof near the old house that still smelled of smoked ham; that delighted us as small children to visualize hams hanging up to cure.

Near that old ranch house was a very large barn/sheep shed where Mr. Josslin kept his lambing sheep and hay for them, horse stalls, grain storage areas, and an area for cattle. It was very old and dilapidated and during the 1940's it was torn down as unsafe; nails and usable lumber were used on the big barn my father built higher on the ridge. During World War II, nails and lumber seemed to be scarce, (and so was money!) so things were salvaged when possible. There was also a tool shed/granary that perhaps is still standing near the A-frame cabin, a four-sided building of rough lumber with the roof coming to a point in the center -- unusual shaped roof building. There were bins for storing oats and areas for storing tools, harnesses for horses, salt for livestock, baling wire and bundle string, etc.

There was also a large old farm equipment shed near the barn where there was a threshing machine, hay mower and rake, grain separator, etc. that Mr. Josslin had used for farming in earlier years. That building, being old when we first saw it, became dilapidated and fell down, also, during the 1950's. The fields that were fenced around the farm were fenced long ago, probably... they were fenced when my parents purchased that part of the ranch.

There also had been a log cabin above that old, original barn on the upper ranch; we located the remains of the cabin in wild berry vines and saved the long bolts that held the corners together as well as some of the old hand-shaped bricks and forged fireplace irons. We wondered who had lived in that cabin after building it, so far from civilization at that time. They had a small spring house over the little creek (dry in the summer) and a garden area; many Daffodills bloom in that area each Spring when the weather warms up. We found some old glass jars in that area as well. Some distance from the old log cabin area was a very old orchard, mostly apple trees and pear trees. My father mentioned some early settlers up on Langell Mountain had a number of horses, and "old timers" told him the area was known as "horse heaven." The road we used to the top of the mountain, rutted by old metal wagon wheels, apparently had been used many years.

If I can be of further assistance, please let me know. Actually, this has been quite an experience for me to mentally go back in time and remember what things were like then when my sister, brother and I were small children. We'd enjoy meeting you some time.

To whom it may concern
My Name is Hugh Patton
I have known the lights for many years.

I've hunted on their cattle ranch, good spots for hunting was around a old orchard and around his irrigation, which stayed green and deer would feed on it. The lights have many cattle, I don't know how many. But I'll say they number in the hundreds

Sincerely
Hugh Patton

RE: File# SWR-179

DEAR MAURICE E. FARR,

The Water Resources Department (WRD) received a little over 500 surface water registration statements in December, 1992. All of the files have been set up and receipts for the fees have been sent. The next step is to insure the maps received in support of the claims are acceptable based on Oregon Revised Statutes (ORS) and Oregon Administrative Rules (OAR).

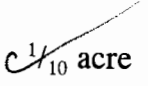

I am returning the map you prepared for Lyle L. or Jancie K. Light. You will find the item which requires completion or correction shown below. I have the description followed by the ORS or OAR site and paraphrased statute or rule.

 conveyance

ORS 539.120 "...the location of and each ditch, canal, pipeline or other means of conveying the water..." You must show the size of the pipe for both domestic and irrigation use.

 diversion point size

OAR 690-28-025-(4)-(c) "The dimensions and capacity of any existing diversion systems." You must show this information for both domestic and irrigation use.

 $\frac{1}{10}$ acre

OAR 690-28-025-(4)-(d) "The number of acres irrigated in each quarter quarter shall be shown to the nearest tenth of an acre." You have shown that both domestic uses include lawn or non-commercial garden, you must show the location and acreage to 1/10th acres.

Salem, OR 97310
(503) 378-3739
FAX (503) 378-8130

You must return the map before the claim can be processed. If you cannot have the map to the WRD within 60 days, please inform me as to when it can be expected. Please mark all correspondence with the file number.

As always, if you have any questions, please give me a call.

Sincerely,

Dear MR & MRS LIGHT,

You failed to submit enough fees with your Surface Water Registration Statement as required under ORS 539.081.

The Water Resources Department records show applications for permits made in the past. The fees paid for domestic and irrigation appear to adequately cover your fees for a claim to a vested right. There was no application made for stockwater in the past and no fees paid. You should have sent a total of $200.00 for the stockwater fees. The amount now due is $200.00. Your claim will not be processed until these remaining fees are received. Your claim has been numbered SWR-179.

Please feel free to contact this office if you have any questions.
