Talk with Tom Paul about agency practice – what do we do when a water right holder comes to us with a right that appears to have been at least partially abandoned or forfeited, and they want to start up the use again. Do we let them? Do we require that they apply for a new water right?

Talk with Darwin – what are the physical details of the project? Is there any existing equipment? What would he need to add to make it work? Can he generate enough power to make it cost effective after the cost of any new equipment?
