

The Use of Direct Push Well Technology for Long-Term Environmental Monitoring in Groundwater Investigations

Course Description: Training introduces participants to the use of direct-push well technology for long-term environmental monitoring, and provides information to evaluate the adequacy of proposed direct-push projects. It provides background in the principles of direct-push wells and provides the state of the art regarding recent research,

When: May 17, and September 6, 2007

Duration of course: 2 hours and 15 minutes

Location: on-line

Cost: Free

Requirement: computer with internet access and pre-registration

Contact: Ann Levine, Interstate Technical & Regulatory Council, www.itrcweb.org or by phone at 503 229-6258

For more information: www.itrcweb.org

This course has been assigned 2.5 continuing education credits (CECs) by the Well Constructor Continuing Education Committee.

NOTE: You must complete the feedback at the end of the course to receive the completion documentation from ITRC.